Address: Grand Place, Central Brussels Brussels Grand' Place Map (Historical) Mannekin Pis Along the Rue de l'Étuve is Brussels' best-known landmark, the Mannekin Pis, usually besieged by a throng of tourists. Aloft Brussels Schuman Hotel is a little out of the city center (though close to public transport) but is recommended for its spacious, modern rooms. The upper sphere has incredible panoramas across the city. Address: Place des Palais, Central Brussels Belgian Royal Museum of Fine Arts | elPadawan / photo modified Belgium's Royal Museum of Fine Arts (1875-81) combines four separate art museums, which together are one of the largest and best art galleries in the world. The beautifully proportioned interior (108 meters by 50 meters) is lavishly furnished and is home to some outstanding stained glass windows created by Bernard van Orley. Neighboring the main building is the Musée Magritte, dedicated to the work of Belgian surrealist artist René Magritte. It was first established in the 11th century and evolved soon after, to become the political and economic center for the city. Head to the transepts to see the finest examples depicting Charles V and Isabella of Portugal (south transept) and the Hungarian royal pair Louis II and Mary (north transept), and then into the Chapel of the Holy Sacrament, to the left of the choir, where the window illustrates the story of the Miracle of the Host. Brussels sits in the center of the country, making it the perfect home base for trips to some of Belgium's top tourist attractions, as well as sightseeing in neighboring countries. Sightseeing: Brussels Hop-On Hop-Off Tour is a convenient and flexible option to see the city sights. Near the border with Germany, the cities of Cologne, Bonn, and Düsseldorf are easily within reach. Calling all Chocolate: Brussels Chocolate Walking Tour and Workshop is a top choice for chocolate lovers. Address: Rue du Musée 9, Central Brussels Official site: www.fine-arts-museum.be Atomium | wing1990hk / photo modified Along with Manneken Pis, the Atomium is Brussels' best-known landmark attraction, and although it's a bit of a journey by tram to get out here, the bizarre 102-meter-high steel and aluminum structure, designed by the architect André Waterkeyn for the 1958 Brussels World Exhibition, is the city's most surreal sight. This four-hour guided tour visits historical landmarks, as well as the city's best chocolate shops (with free tastings) and culminates in a workshop, where you can learn about the history of chocolate, watch a demonstration, inhale the sweet aromas, and create your own treat to take home. Address: Parvis Street Gudule, Central Brussels St Michael's Cathedral Map (Historical) Belgian Comic Strip Center | Katherine / photo modified This gorgeous 1906 building, designed by Victor Horta, is home to the wonderful Comic Strip Center, devoted to the history of cartoons and comic strips in the country that gave the world The Smurfs and Tintin. Address: Boulevard de l' Empereur, Central Brussels Notre-Dame du Sablon The 15th- to 16th-century church of Notre-Dame du Sablon (Onze Lieve Vrouw op de Zavel), generally considered one of the loveliest Late Gothic churches in Belgium, was built as a replacement for a small chapel first erected on the sandy expanse of the Sablon by the Crossbowmen's Guild in 1304. It combines temporary exhibition halls with the basement galleries of the Musée Fin-de-Siècle, dedicated to artwork from the period between 1884 and 1914, when Brussels was one of Europe's cultural capitals. The Japanese Tower, in the northernmost corner of the park, was originally built for the Paris Exhibition of 1900. The most recognizable building on the square is the Hôtel de Ville (Town Hall), built in 1402 with the intention of upstaging the Stadhuis in the rival city of Bruges. Mid-Range Hotels: Made in Louise is set within a traditional townhouse building, within walking distance of all the major central sights. Kept in the sacrum is a figure of the Virgin, a copy, so legend has it, of a Madonna brought to the chapel in 1348 by a woman from Antwerp. Baet Soetens, to whom the Virgin had appeared. Address: Place des Palais 7, Brussels Official site: Mont des Arts The Mont des Arts was created between 1956 and 1958, occupying the elevated site between the Place Royale and the Place de l'Albertine. It's in an excellent central location. Hotel Noqa Brussels offers some quirky decor flourishes and simple rooms in a quiet neighborhood that is still walkable to the center. There are also interactive programs that encourage children to become involved, like the "Underground Treasure Hunt," which includes a flashlight, treasure map, period costume pieces, and a puzzle for them to solve. West of Liège, Namur's central location at the junction of the Sambre and the Meuse Rivers made it an important trade city, and its citadel was a strategic military site, resulting in an interesting array of architectural choices. The halls of the Musée Modern concentrate on artwork from the late 19th century to the present. Although Brussels may not have the star attractions of other Belgian towns, the capital has more than enough things to do to keep visitors occupied for a couple of days, with a clutch of world-class museums and art galleries, as well as quirkier things to do, such as the Atomium, and some wonderful remnants of old architecture in the old town quarter. It is the largest Magritte collection in the world. Ghent and Bruges Day Trip from Brussels is a popular full-day excursion, which explores the historical and cultural attractions of these beautiful UNESCO-listed cities. The windows of the cloister are decorated with the arms of more than 40 abbesses and nuns. On this full-day guided tour, you travel through the pretty windmill country of both Belgium and Holland and explore the quaint cobbled streets and canals of Amsterdam, visiting top sights such as Dam Square, the Anne Frank House, and the Royal Palace. The interior of the church is breathtaking, in particular because of its marvelous stained glass. From the square between them is a fine view of the lower central city. Between here and Brussels, the smaller city of Ghent has a similar ensemble of narrow alleys, beautiful buildings, and canal boats, without the mass of tourists. See also: Where to Stay in BrusselsNote: Some businesses may be temporarily closed due to recent global health and safety issues. Among the most impressive are the Maximilian Chamber, hung with Brussels tapestries; the large Council Chamber with a superb ceiling by Victor Janssens and tapestries to his designs; the great banquet hall and the Marriage Chamber, both beautifully paneled; and the Escalier d'Honneur, with murals illustrating the history of Brussels. From the cupola is a breathtaking view of the city and across the countryside to Antwerp. Amsterdam Day Trip: The Amsterdam Day Trip from Brussels allows you to visit another country without changing bases. Coudenberg Palace has been excavated to reveal the cellars and tunnels of the former Palace of Brussels, as well as forgotten streets that had been buried beneath the city for centuries. The harmony of its architecture is achieved by the short period of construction here, with most buildings raised between 1696 and 1700. Address: Maison Wauquez, 20 Rue des Sables, Central Brussels Official site: Royal Palace on Place Royale A favorite attraction for photo-ops, the most important building on this square is the Royal Palace (Palais Royal), which is used by the Belgian royal family as an official residence. Budget Hotels: MEININGER Hotel Brussels City Center is always busy thanks to its canal-side location, within walking distance to the central sights; its fun and youthful social scene; and its modern rooms. Hotel a la Grande Cloche is Brussels' longest-running hotel and, after a full renovation in 2019, now offers contemporary-styled rooms. The present statue was made in 1619 by Jérôme Duquesnoy the Elder and has been stolen on several occasions though always recovered. The facade is impressive, rising majestically above a broad flight of steps and crowned with twin 69-meter-high towers designed by Jan van Ruysbroeck. Grand Place (Grote Markt) Right in the heart of Brussels Old Town, the city's main plaza (known as Grand Place) is one of the best preserved in Europe. The Royal Art and History Museum is home to Belgium's national archeology collections, with pieces drawn from throughout the world, as well as one of the most extensive tapestry collections in the world. Ghent & Bruges Day Trip: From Brussels, it's easy to explore Belgium's other world-class cities and even neighboring countries on a day trip while basing yourself in one place. A constantly rotating exhibition of 200 original comic strip drawings by Belgian and French comic artists is shown here. Inside are several magnificent rooms. The hothouses, erected in Leopold II's time, are the highlight of the gardens and are open to the public during April and May when many of the plants are in flower. Address: Rue du Monastere, Saint Gilles, Brussels The best place to stay in Brussels for sightseeing is within walking distance of Grand Place (Grote Markt). Grand Place's defining character is its uniformity of Baroque style, with some Flemish influences. The Musée Old Masters holds a collection of famous works by Flemish and Dutch Old Masters. Also of interest is the burial chapel of the Thurn and Taxis family, partly the work of Luc Fayd'herbe. This is a fun and time-efficient way to see the picturesque Belgian countryside and visit iconic city sights, such as Ghent's St. Bavo's Cathedral and the Basilica of the Holy Blood in medieval Bruges. Near the coast to the northwest, in the Flanders region, the city of Bruges is a favorite tourist destination because of its medieval architecture and romantic canals. Address: Parvis de la Basilique 1, Koekelberg, Brussels Official site: Abbaye de la Cambre In 1200, Cistercian nuns founded an abbey here, which was later destroyed in the 16th century but then rebuilt. This wide square in the heart of the Old Town is popular for its great shopping, dining, and well-preserved architecture and is a great place from which to explore attractions such as the Mannekin Pis fountain and Saint-Michel Cathedral. Binoculars can be rented on-site. In addition, the museum documents the rise in popularity of Belgian and French comic strips through a cleverly curated collection of original manuscripts, draft sketches, and imaginatively reconstructed sets including Lucky Luke's saloon and Tim, Struppi, and Captain Haddock's moon rocket. This was transferred to the newly established Musées Royaux in 1846. The building represents a molecule of iron magnified 165 million times. Back in Belgium, the small university town of Leuven sits east of Brussels on the way to Liège, the country's third largest city, which is celebrated for its industrial roots. Once you've craned your neck at Gothic and Baroque splendor, don't forget to stock up on Brussels' famous chocolate. The Belgian flag, flown from the roof, signals the sovereign's presence, and a ceremonial Changing of the Guard takes place every day at about 2:30pm. From late July to late August, free guided tours of the palace's interior, taking in the grand reception rooms and halls, are available. Address: Eeuwveestlaan 20, Boulevard du Centenaire Official site: Coudenberg Palace Archeological Site | Bill Smith / photo modified One of Brussels' most unique things to do is explore this active archaeological site, which was rediscovered in the 1980s. Luxury Hotels: Hotel Amigo, in the heart of the old town, near Grand Place, offers spacious, modern rooms with unique art, as well as on-site amenities including a gym (for an alternative workout, take the massive spiral staircase to your room).MAS Residence with its large, high-ceilinged rooms (each with a kitchenette) that have kept their original interior architectural features, is within easy walking distance to the town center.The Hotel Brussels is an ultra-modern, central alternative that is popular for its panoramic views and posh lounges. Its centerpiece is the monumental Palais du Cinquantenaire, the two wings of which, linked in 1905 by a massive triumphal arch designed by the French architect Charles Girault, house two of Brussels' most interesting museums. Address: Avenue de la Renaissance, Central Brussels Parc du Cinquantenaire Jubelpark Map (Historical) Château Royal Although the Château Royal, home of the Belgian Royal Family, is not itself open to the public, the park surrounding it at Laeken is. The Bibliothèque Albert I was founded during the period of Burgundian rule and comprises more than three million volumes together with a valuable collection of manuscripts and several interesting museums. The border with the Netherlands is not far from here, where you can explore the stunning churches of Breda, enjoy vibrant entertainment in Rotterdam, visit the countless museums of The Hague, or even spend some time enjoying the iconic city of Amsterdam. The lower spheres are home to a permanent exhibition on the history of the structure. Motel One, with its excellent central location and small but modern, well-appointed rooms, is always a popular choice with visitors. The history of the Grand Place dates back much earlier though. Although he can be traced back to at least 1388, nothing much is known about the origin of the figure of a little boy urinating, popularly referred to as "the oldest citizen of Brussels." The Manneken is, however, surrounded by various legends. The building was only completed in 1970. Surrounding the palace are an ensemble of cultural buildings boasting Neoclassical facades. Here, you get a proper feel for Belgian life, especially its fantastic restaurant and café culture. Find out more about the best places to visit with our list of the top attractions and things to do in Brussels. To the north of Brussels, the town of Antwerp gained its fame as a center of art and craftsmanship and is home to several noteworthy museums. During major celebrations, events, and festivals in Brussels, the statue is famed for being dressed in costume. Today, visitors can enter the building to explore its sci-fi-style interiors. Address: Rue de la Regence, Central Brussels Parc du Cinquantenaire The Parc du Cinquantenaire was established in 1880 to commemorate the country's 50th anniversary. The former 14th-century abbey church is a slender, elegant building with Baroque vaulting. Written by Jess LeeNov 17, 2020We may earn a commission from affiliate links () Brussels, capital of Belgium, principal seat of the Belgian Royal Family, and capital of the European Union, is a remarkably small, easy-going, and human-sized city for all its importance. The architecturally imposing complex of large buildings includes the Bibliothèque Albert I and the strikingly modern Palais de la Dynastie and Palais de Congrès. Address: Avenue de Madrid, Laeken, Brussels Basilique Nationale du Sacré Coeur The Koekelberg district is dominated by the massive Basilique Nationale du Sacré Coeur (Nationale Basiliek van het Heilig Hart), the fifth largest church in the world and brainchild of Leopold II, begun in 1905 to mark the country's 75th anniversary. Unlike beautiful Bruges and Ghent, with their hordes of tourists, Brussels is Belgium's main economic and educational hub, which gives the city a more workaday feel than other towns. Address: Rue de l'Étuve, Central Brussels Saint-Michel Cathedral (Sint-Michiels Kathedraal) Dedicated to St. Michael and St. Gudula (the patron saints of Brussels) this Gothic church was first founded in 1225 but only completed in the 15th century. Well-known works on display here include Gerard David's Adoration of the Magi, Rogier van der Weyden's The Mourning of Christ, Pietà by Petrus Christus, and Dirk Bouts' Judgement of the Emperor Otto. There are delightful footpaths and a number of attractions worth seeing, such as the monument to Leopold I at the center of the circular flowerbed in front of the palace. Not surprisingly, it displays something of a mixture of styles, impressing nevertheless by its sheer size (141 meters by 107 meters). It's popular for its cozy, modern rooms and friendly staff who go out of their way to help. The Palais des Académies, home of the Royal Academy of Sciences and once the residence of the Crown Prince of Orange, and the Palais des Beaux-Arts (Paleis voor Schone Kunst) on the west side of the plaza, designed and built in the 1920s by Victor Horta, are two of the finest examples. The museum grew out of a collection first set up in 1797 and was originally housed in the former palace of Charles of Lorraine. According to one, the fountain is a memorial to a courageous infant who averted a conflagration, according to another, it commemorates the son of a count who succumbed to a pressing urge while taking part in a procession. Farther west and sitting near the border with France, the city of Mons (Bergen) is between Brussels and Paris, and is known for its impressive buildings and festivals. Inside is a painting by Albert Bouts (The Mocking of Christ) and the shrine of St. Boniface, a 13th-century Bishop of Brussels. Now, set in lovely French gardens, the abbey houses the National Geographical Institute and an art college. The foundations of the medieval palace have been cleared to allow tourists the opportunity to explore, and the museum has free audio guides that take you through the dig site. Brussels Map - Attractions (Historical) Brussels Walking Tours Map (Historical) Inside is an excellent collection of art and an ongoing exhibition on the history of the basilica. The Belgian Army Museum and Museum of Military History (Koninklijk Museum van het Leger en van de Militaire Geschiedenis) provides an overview of the development of military technology and of the major campaigns fought on Belgian soil. Much of the square's elegant character is due to the unique architecture of its elegant Gildehuizen (guild houses) with their magnificent gables, pilasters, and balustrades, ornately carved stonework, and rich gold decoration. Thanks to the informative commentary, you can learn about the city's prime attractions from the comfort of an open-top double decker bus, hopping off to explore your favorite sights. It stops at 22 different points around the city, including Grand Place, the Atomium, and the Royal Palace. The picture of Christ giving his blessing, which hangs above the altar, is by Georges Minne. The town of Ypres sits closer to Belgium's coast, famous for being the site of major WWI battles, and just to the south in France, the city of Lille has many Flemish influences.
